Hollye Schumacher & Eric Shunk

September 15, 2007

Lake Tahoe, Nevada

Hollye Schumacher and Eric Shunk chose the cool mountains of Nevada for their autumn nuptials. As a wedding photographer of distinction, Hollye planned an event to be as visually stunning as it was warm and inviting for all her guests. Everything from the décor and lighting to flowers was designed by Angelic Grove with the help of three semi-trailers from Phoenix.

Lake Tahoe served as the backdrop for the four-day celebration that began with a party on Thursday evening for the early arriving guests and family. The rehearsal dinner on Friday was highlighted by Sallye, the mother of the bride sitting in with the band—on her ukulele.

The wedding day started around three with some creative wedding photography of a happy bride and groom on their skateboards. After the family photographs, the ceremony got underway on the shore of Lake Tahoe. As the groom kissed his bride, the horn of the vintage boat, The Thunderbird, sounded and whisked them away for a sunset tour around the lake for more exquisite photographs.

The bride and groom then joined their guests, all attired in black and white, in a magnificently designed tent for the reception, dinner and party. The live band and celebrity DJ rolled on to the wee hours of the morning to the best of music.

The southern-style brunch on Sunday morning got everyone moving and provided a chance for the bride and groom to bid all their guests, family and friends good-bye. It was a wedding to remember.
